Three Nigeran exchange students (Roland Delu, Festus George and can't remember the third) were stranded in San Diego when the exchange parents from a Christian Church found out that African students were black. When Emma Jones found out about all this, she got hopping mad and drove to San Diego and brought them home so they could have a temporary place to stay until they got settled. Roland stayed the longest and gave Emma fits because he was a Prince and expected her (being a woman) to wait on him hand and foot, including running a shower for him. On one occasion he flooded the back part of the house by finishing his shower and leaving the water running – because she refused to turn it on for him. Festus George was a very happy, charming and charismatic person and made us laugh a lot.

He related to us that when he was younger he was hired by the U.S. Postal Service to run the mail from Flagstaff Arizona to Sacramento California during winters when travel was impossible. He would make the round trip in three weeks, rest a few days and do it again until they didn't need him. He said he made good money doing that.

Pine Springs Arizona Baha'i conference

Festivities in front of "Oneness of Mankind" poster

Walter and Emma were very supportive of this Baha'i Pow Wow, also known as the Pine Springs Conference. There were two of these Baha'i conferences during the 1960's.

Walter recorded the proceedings for this conference on 1/4 inch magnetic tape, but the results (after 1990 when he passed) were unintelligible. According to the Baha'i News U.S. Supplement No 76 June 1964, Hand of the Cause Zikru'llah Khadem was present with over 1500 in attendance including believers from all over the world, and afterwards "the inhabitants of the Navajo community of Pine Springs declared themselves almost without exception as followers of the new faith."

Dale Allen ready to throw some food! This particular year at Geyserville, we youth had a lot of fun working in the kitchen. When cleanup was about finished and most of the dishes had been washed and put away there would often times be some pranking and one thing would lead to another and there would be water, soap suds, and sometimes food getting thrown around at each other and things would get out of hand. Then we would have to clean up the mess. But it was a lot of fun.

648GV 1952 Whistling Annie.jpg

This is a picture of the Geyserville Geysers, about 20 miles up the mountain from the Baha'i School. Ernie Jones took the picture. He and Anne Gardner spent a lot of time together that summer. Ernie had to coax reluctant Anne to get close enough to this really noisy "Whistling Annie" geyser to take this picture.

She and I would sneak out after bedtime and talk in the children's class room building until all hours of the morning. One night one of the teachers heard noises on her evening rounds and came to investigate. We were doing what we usually did - just sitting and talking. The teacher was one of the most enlightened teachers we had – she realized that there was nothing immoral happening and just asked us to finish our conversation and go to bed. We did, but that didn't stop us from having other late night conversations. Those were really innocent times.
