

George Ronald

A Bibliographic History

by
Jan Jasion

Though located in England except for a brief pause in Wales in the 1950s, George Ronald is a truly international publisher. It publishes mostly in English though a few other languages have slipped through: German, Italian, Persian and Welsh. But its books have been translated and published by others in many languages including Chinese, Dutch, French, German, Hindi and various other Indian languages, Icelandic, Italian, Norwegian, Persian, Portuguese, Russian, Spanish, and Braille.

The range of GR's subject matter in the 70 years of its existence is astonishing – both geographically, from a radio station in Ecuador to trees in New Zealand, a Canadian painter in Bulgaria, a Japanese-influenced potter in Cornwall, a South African painter, human rights in Iran, children's tales from the Cameroon, the redwoods of California; and by subject: business ethics; comparative religion; studies of sacred texts; Islam; poetry; music; novels; biography and philosophy. Mention should be made of birds, dogs and horses both mythical and real, as well as such one-offs as helicopters, railways, a Hausa grammar and a military training manual. However, George Ronald is foremost and primarily a publisher of books related to the history, teachings, doctrines and personalities of the Bahá'í Faith and has been so since the first years of its existence. In the last 50 years, since 1963, it has published almost 300 titles in this field.
